

New Product at IAAPA

Orlando Show Floor Was Busy & Full of New Games

This year's IAAPA Expo had plenty to offer in terms of networking, continued education and business strategies, but for many attendees from the amusement industry, it's the product that keeps them coming back. This catalog showcases a broad selection of the latest games that brightened up the show floor, and was compiled using manufacturer responses gathered before the show opened.

WePlay VR

VR Experience

The WePlay VR attraction is a glass-walled expandable play area that takes you strolling through a virtual world using a surprisingly small footprint (14' x 12'). The cabinet exterior features detachable printed boards on the lower half that depict an overgrown temple, and windows on the upper half for safety and visibility. A series of modular internal walls and a motion floor platform allow operators to customize the pathways inside for a constant update to gameplay.

The player, wearing a VR headset and backpack, can freely move around the unit and interact with physical objects and walls that augment the VR world they experience. The company's first, interactive VR game is Mayan Adventure, which takes the player on a trip through a Mayan ruin to find the ultimate treasure. The firm promises new games will be available to upgrade your WePlay attraction and keep it fresh.

Hoopla

Carnival-style ticket redemption

ICE and Sega worked together on the development of Hoopla, a game that reimagines ICE's classic carnival series, adding modern tech and a unique spin to the traditional "hoop" game.

The timed ticket game challenges players to toss bright yellow hoops onto an arrangement of seven pegs to activate a bonus round, where they will have to react quickly and land a final hoop onto a moving peg.

The game's eye-catching, lowered cabinet is designed with kids in mind and features a rolling conveyor belt to feed every player a constant stream of rings to toss.

According to Sega, operators across the world have found success adding a skill wall to their centers, and a carnival game like Hoopla is an ideal addition to challenge your guests' skills.

ICE will build and market the game in North America while Sega handles the manufacture and sales for the rest of the world.

Pirates of the Carribean Pinball

JJP's Pirates of the Caribbean pinball condenses the best bits of the brands' five feature films, giving fans the chance to play as one of 22 recognizable characters. There are three separate versions of the game: A Collector's Edition ($12,500), Limited Edition ($9,500) and Standard ($8,500). The differences are numerous between versions; the CE has barnacle-covered legs and siding, a moving ship in a bottle topper, rotating pop bumpers, extra toys and a custom, hand-drawn playfield art package featuring the villainous Davy Jones.

Differences between the Standard and Limited Edition mainly focus on features and cosmetics. The LE comes with a headphone jack, black legs and siding, more toys, a topper and a 72-light "starfield" on the back panel (also included in the CE).

Unique features dot the playfield no matter what version you buy, though. Each table has a spinning wheel that can be activated directly above the main flippers, which when lit can give you extra points or even allow you to plunder your opponent's points or balls. A secondary display showing Captain Jack's compass, which in the film's shows the direction of his heart's desire, constantly shows the player the best shot they can take at that time.

Golden Saloon
Pusher

Golden Saloon is a four-player virtual coin-pusher with a western tavern theme. Players shoot coins to break and destroy items rotating on the tower. Destroyed items will turn into coins or gold bars and drop onto the pusher. Just like a real coin-pusher, players have the chance of winning by pushing coins and bonus items off the edge. To add more excitement, players can get free shots if they can fill the “star meter” – once filled, the spinning wheel is activated to award corresponding number of free shots. The Mega Bonus can be won by collecting a series of four cards.

All Star Baseball / Zombie League All Stars

Retro Pitch/Bat Games

Valley-Dynamo is throwing it back with two new versions of a classic baseball game. All Star Baseball and Zombie League All Stars reinvent the classic electro-mechanical batting games many may remember. The cabinet looks like a pinball machine, but with a single bat flipper instead of multiple. The game can be played by two people at a time, with one batting and the other sending a mixture of three pitches to the plate.

Several game modes are available to keep players interested, and players must aim for different back-field targets depending on the play style. The main difference between Zombie League and All Star Baseball is cosmetic, with Zombie League touting a horrifying undead theme while All Star Baseball has a retro look.
